SLAIN KING'S BODY RESTS IN PANTHEON

coincided Palace at exactly 11:30 o'clock on its long march of over three and a half miles to the church to the Church of San Vincente, which is attached to the royal pantheon.

The funeral cortege moved more slowly than had been expected, and it was the middle of the afternoon before it reached the church. The pageant was a glittering one. It was headed by a section of cavalry, followed by the municipal guards. Then came six grooms of the chamber in gala dress, followed by the carriages of the judges, councilors, members of the House of Peers, ambassadors, princes, government and military officials and ecclesiastical functionaries. On either side of the hearse marched a file of soldiers of the royal guard.

The rear of the procession consisted of the royal bodyguard, the military household of the king, mounted officers, and a company of cavalry.

Gilded Coaches of Other Days.

Apart from the hearse themselves, which were covered with heavy draperies and trappings of black velvet, bordered with fringes of gold, the features of the cortege that attracted the most attention were the gilded state coaches of the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, which were reserved for the use of the foreign missions and the highest dignitaries of Portugal. The first three coaches in line were filled with court functionaries. In the fourth rode the ministers of the United States, Brazil and Russia and the Papal Nuncio. The fifth was occupied by Count Ormessin and the other members of the French mission, while the sixth carried the royal princes of Germany, Spain, Great Britain and Italy.

In contrast to the sombre occasion, the day commenced with glorious weather, the sun shining brilliantly, and the air filled with the slow peal of church bells. Messengers were seen passing through the streets bearing wreaths and floral pieces. Some of these were remembrances from foreign kings and rulers that were being sent to the palace. Clarions sounded down the principal avenue, announcing the approach of the regiments, which later followed the funeral procession. Then from afar came a fanfare of bugles, the drumming of the cavalry, which deployed rapidly to guard the route of the cortege.

Brief Service at Palace.

During the morning King Manuel received the missions sent to Lisbon by the sovereigns and chiefs of state of foreign countries. The king and queen were present at this function.

While the cortege was being organized the members of the royal family took their last view of their dead at the palace. Prayers were said in the chapel by the priests, and then the two coffins were carried out, the King, the two Queens and the Duke of Oporto marching behind. Manuel was clad in the uniform of a midshipman. The two Queens, who walked in the mourning garb of English widows, their black cloaks covered by a long veil, carried, as did the King, tall lighted candles. They left the coffins at the portals of the palace.

Memorial Services in Paris.

PARIS, February 8.—Solemn memorial services were held in Notre Dame cathedral to-day by Archbishop Amette for the repose of the souls of King Carlos and his son. Count de Sousa Rosa, the Portuguese minister, several representatives of the Orleans family, and many persons prominent in French society and a large gathering of priests were present.

In the transept of the cathedral rested two catafalques draped in black and surrounded by Portuguese flags.

Coaches Drawn by Mules.

The heavily armed procession which left the Necessidade Palace was reminiscent of a bygone age. Cavalry with pikes led the way; infantry and artillery brought up the rear. The cortege proper was surrounded by squadrons of dragoons. It consisted of the funeral cars following in the wake of high-seated gilded coaches, each drawn by six pairs of richly caparisoned mules, in which rode the special ambassadors and the high dignitaries of the cortege. These lumbering, creaking, springless vehicles are Portuguese pride, dating back to the golden age. Each has a romantic history. Running alongside of these were the coaches of the nobles, drawn by drawn sabres. The crown, veiled with crepe, was borne in a separate carriage. The sword-bearers and the staff-bearers walked ahead of the funeral cars, and three rows of tapering black-headed lackeys in the royal liveries of red and yellow, and haberdashery with arms reversed, marched behind the cars.

The head of the cortege drew up before the stone steps leading to the Church of San Vincente, a historic edifice built in the reign of Philip II, within an adjoining wing of the royal pantheon are entombed members of the royal family. It is situated in the old quarter of the town, near an ancient monastery, now the palace of the Primate of Lisbon. A group of clergy, headed by the Patriarch of Lisbon, awaited the cortege at the steps. The coffins were carried from the hearse and, enveloped in the national flag, were placed on biers in front of the church. Troops lined up about them in the open square, and now occurred what seemed to many the most touching incident of the day.

From one side slowly marched a company of men, wearing long black robes and carrying lighted torches. They were members of the ancient sacred fraternity of the Holy House of Lily, organized in the fifteenth century, to which Portuguese tradition has accorded the privilege of uttering the first absolute prayer for the dead sovereigns, as well as later of claiming the catafalque and burial pall, which they may sell for the benefit of their charities.

The service is symbolized by disregard for all worldly vanities and by humility. The churchmen in order intoned the accustomed prayers, while the troops stood at attention, and in the distance could be heard the minute guns of the land batteries, to which the British and Spanish cruisers replied gun for gun.

Borne Into the Church.

This brief but imposing ceremony finished, the cortege, with the words "Requiescat in pace," sprinkled the coffins with holy water, and they were borne by the high court dignitaries into the church and laid side by side on a catafalque in front of the altar.

Meanwhile the special missions conducted the special tributes built for their use. The interior of the edifice was draped from ceiling to floor with rich hangings of purple velvet, embroidered in gold and silver. The light of the candles, which was also reflected from the jeweled orders covering the breasts of most of the mourners who filled the cathedral.

The second absolute prayer being pronounced by the patriarch, a requiem mass was celebrated. The ceremony in the church lasted half an hour, and the coffins remained for some time for the view, and were then carried to the mortuary chapel adjoining the church, where another mass was said for the repose of the souls of the dead.

Comas to the Patriarch.

The ceremony of handing over the coffins to the Patriarch of Lisbon was carried out immediately after the departure of the members of the cortege. The grand archbishop, who had been waiting in the mortuary chapel, received the coffins and declared upon solemn oath that the bodies of King Carlos and Crown Prince Luis Philippe really were contained in the coffins; that he had seen and recognized them. He then locked them in and handed the keys to the cathedral. High court officials signed as witnesses the two documents regarding the handing over of the keys.

The display of flowers in the interior of the cathedral was remarkable. The tributes erected for the diplomats and other official guests, as well as the altar and chapel rails and the four high flanking pillars, were thickly hung with wreaths.

Two of the tributes, placed fully six feet in circumference, occupied the most prominent position against the altar rails. These were from the Emperor of Germany. Another, somewhat similar in proportions, came from the United States. The tributes included the branch of the Orleans family, were represented by handsome floral tributes, and the British, American, Spanish and other foreign colonies sent floral pieces in great numbers.

The Funeral Service in the Church.

The funeral service in the Church of San Vincente was imposing. The catafalque was placed about the middle of the church, under the dome. The two biers were ornamented with gold embroidery, while the catafalque was of black and silver. Around the three sides of the catafalque were arranged massive brass candelabra, with tapers reaching, some eight and some ten feet from the ground. Up the steep black-carpeted stone steps the heavy black-clothed and draped biers were carried, and deposited on the two parallel biers a few feet inside the door. Here the first prayers were said and the responses sung.

The ponderous coffins were borne up the church, that of the prince first, then that of the king, by court officials. It took twenty stalwart men to bear the massive sarcophagus containing the body of King Carlos. The two coffins were in the same fashion carried within the chancel and placed on the sloping biers of the catafalque.

Behind the King's coffin walked all the members of the new ministry. These now joined the brilliant congregation of mourners assembled under the dome. A huge cross was justed prone between the two biers. Tall lighted tapers were distributed among the officers, priests and court functionaries, who were kneeling in prayer. The service was begun. This most impressive portion of the service was enriched by orchestral and vocal music. The service was concluded with an absolute. An interesting feature of the ceremony was the embalmment of the body, carried by an official, and guided by an admiral with a drawn sword. Portugal has no crown but the emblem crest at the foot of the double bier.

The bodies will lie in state for three days, and then will be consigned to the tombs in the Pantheon.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP-- RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

La Grippe is Epidemic Catarrh.

THE disease now known as "grip" used to be called "influenza." It very closely resembles a cold, but is more tenacious in its hold upon the system, and produces more profound disturbances.

Grip is in reality epidemic catarrh. When it once begins it spreads over the country very rapidly.

People do not catch the grip from each other, but each one catches it from the atmosphere.

"Most Effective Medicine Ever Tried for La Grippe."

Robt. L. Madison, A. M., Principal of Culwhee High School, Painter, N. C., is chairman of the Jackson County Board of Education.

He is a writer of occasional verse, and has contributed to a number of leading papers and magazines—religious, educational and secular.

In speaking of Peruna, Mr. Madison says:

"I am hardly ever without Peruna in my home. It is the most effective medicine that I have ever tried for la grippe."

"It also cured my wife of nasal catarrh. Her condition at one time was such that she could not at night breathe through her nostrils."

"In consequence, an inflamed condition of the throat was brought about, getting worse and worse and yielding to no remedy until Peruna was tried."

Healthy Mucous Membranes.

Those who are fortunate enough to have perfectly healthy mucous membranes naturally do not catch the grip. The mucous membranes lining the nose, throat and lungs, when in a normal state, are an effective barrier against the invasion of grip.

But if there happens to be the slightest catarrhal derangement of the mucous membranes, then the victim becomes an easier prey to the grip.

This in part explains why some people get the grip, while others do not.

The rational thing to do is to keep the system free from catarrh. In attempting to do this most people have found Peruna to be invaluable.

Systemic Catarrh, the Result of La Grippe. Pe-ru-na Receives Credit for Present Good Health.

Mrs. Jennie W. Gilmore, Box 44, White Oak, Ind. Ter., formerly Keeper for Indiana Reform School for Boys, writes:

"Six years ago I had la grippe, which was followed by systemic catarrh."

"The only thing I used was Peruna and within a few days I was better. I have been in better health the last three years than for years before."

"I give Peruna all the credit for my good health."

A Northern man at the head of the committee.

Mr. Flood says he has not withdrawn, but when pressed as to whether he would do so, declined to make any statement. The committee will elect a chairman and secretary Monday night.

It is understood that Representative Frank Clark, of Florida, will be chosen secretary of the committee.

NONE BETTER IN WORLD

Admiral Converse on Reports on Ships of the American Navy.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 8.—Admiral Converse to-day submitted to Secretary Metcalf a report on the results of his investigation into the recently published criticisms of the designs of American naval vessels. It is not probable that its contents will be made public until the President has had an opportunity to examine it.

It may be stated, however, that the report undertakes to demonstrate as clearly as figures, comparisons of foreign navies and scale drawings can establish the fact, that the fighting ships of the American navy were, at the date of the report, the best ships in the world of their class, and that they are to-day comparable on even terms with the ships of any other navy. It is declared in the report that everything that human forethought or

The Medical Profession Recognizes The Grip as Epidemic Catarrh.

During an epidemic of grip Peruna should be used. The doses recommended on the bottle are sufficient.

After the grip has once been acquired, Dr. Hartman recommends the use of Peruna in teaspoonful doses every hour during the acute stage, after which the directions on the bottle should be followed.

Experience has shown that the people who use Peruna as a remedy for grip generally recover sooner and are less liable to the distressing and long-continued after-effects of the grip.

When Peruna has not been used during the course of the grip, and the patient finds himself suffering from the after-effects of this disease, a course of Peruna should be resorted to.

Suffered Twelve Years from After-Effects of La Grippe.

Mr. Victor Patenaude, 328 Madison St., Topeka, Kan., member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe, and I never really recovered my health and strength, but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work."

"Two years ago I began using Peruna, and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again."

"This winter I had another attack of la grippe, but Peruna soon drove it out of my system. My wife and I consider Peruna a household remedy."

Pneumonia Followed La Grippe.

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aymer, Ontario, Can., writes:

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time at little expense."

Pe-ru-na—A Tonic After La Grippe.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wells, Sr., Delaware, Ohio, writes: "After a severe attack of la grippe, I took Peruna and found it a very good tonic."

Mrs. Jane Gift, Athens, Ohio, writes: "Six years ago I had la grippe very bad. I had a testing time, when I was quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time at little expense."

My husband bought me a bottle of Peruna. I was soon able to do my work. I continued using it until I was cured."

list in which to prepare a bill of exceptions, pending which sentence was suspended.

The following individuals were indicted on this conspiracy charge: Ex-Senate Senator W. W. Sterner, ex-United States Commissioner H. H. Hendricks, Clarence A. Zachary, A. Zachary, Charles A. Watson, Clyde Glass, ex-Commissioner of the General Land Office Binger Hermann, ex-United States District Attorney John H. Hall, ex-United States Assistant Attorney Edwin A. WASHINGTON, D. C., February 8.—Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American person who was captured by Bulgarian brigands near the town of Dumbala, in the autumn of 1901, and subsequently ransomed, called upon Secretary Root at the State Department today and urged him to make a demand on the Turkish government for $60,000, the amount of the ransom paid in her case. She wanted that amount returned to the persons in this country who had contributed by popular subscription.

Secretary Root promised to examine the record in this case, which was disposed of before he assumed his present office.

PROTESTANTS PROTEST

Calls Attention of King to Law Against His Majesty Attending Catholic Church.

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.]

LONDON, February 8.—The presence of King Edward VII. at Alexandria at the memorial services to King Carlos of Portugal in St. James Roman Catholic Church this morning was the first time that Their Majesties have attended services in a Roman Catholic Church in this country.

The protest was made by a committee and produced a protest from the Council of the Protestant Alliance at a meeting held this afternoon. The resolution passed by the Alliance humbly pointing out to His Majesty that by act of Parliament in 1880 it was provided that "all and every person who shall hold communion with the See or Church of Rome shall be excluded and be forever incapable to inherit, possess or enjoy the crown and Government of this realm and the people of these realms shall be absolved from their allegiance."

Danderine

GREW MISS LEWIS' HAIR

AND WE CAN PROVE IT

The Great Danderine Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results

MISS Lewis' hair was very thin and it was less than two feet in length when she began using Danderine. She says her hair and scalp are now fairly teeming with new life and vigor. That's the main secret of this great remedy's success as a hair grower. It enlivens, invigorates and fairly electrifies the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, causing unusual and unheard-of activity on the part of these two most important organs, resulting in a strenuous and continuous growth of the hair.

The following is a reproduction of Miss Lewis' last letter:

January 3, 1905.

Dear Doctor Knowlton:—

You know (told you in my first letter that my hair would not reach below my shoulders, and that all of it together made one tiny braid.

I am sending you my photograph, which I had taken at Stevens Bros. It tells the whole story better than I can tell it. Everybody I know is using Danderine, so you see I am doing something to show my appreciation.

Sincerely yours, (Miss) EVA LEWIS.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer the world has ever known. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1. per bottle.
